PATRON PREVIEW

William "Bill" Wolfe

Twenty-plus year patron William Wolfe, known to staff as "Bill," is an amazingly well read man. He spends "hours and hours and hours" reading and visits the library at least four times a week. When his asthma wasn't so bad, he used to walk to the library everyday, said his dad, Bob Wolfe.

knows someone who found a job by using the library.

Like his father, Bill also appreciates that the staff always take time to help him. They find materials for him at the library or online, he explained. Bill especially remembers Renee, the former Head of Circulation, now retired.

"She was a very nice lady," he said. "She did a lot of things to help me, like finding me newspapers or websites. It's a pretty cool library!"

"Your staff is excellent," Bob continued. "He (Bill) has a speech problem, but they always find what he's looking for."

When asked why the library is important, Bill said that he thinks the library is a resource for people who need help finding a job and he
